CONFIRMATION

Its unanimous selection by the Judges of the Book-of-the-Month Club—Donald Gordon's "A.A.A." Virginia Kirkus' unqualified prophecy of success—the first trade orders (the biggest we've ever had on any book)—all gratifyingly confirm our own opinion as expressed in Publishers' Weekly two weeks ago.

In case you did not see our statement, we repeat it now:

We believe that The Forty Days of Musa Dagh by Franz Werfel is the greatest combination of enduring literature and magnificent story that we have ever published or that has been published in our time.

We believe that this opinion will be shared by booksellers and critics.

We feel certain, as we have never felt before, of a huge and lasting sale.

The Forty Days of Musa Dagh will be published Nov. 30.

Frankly, for a moment we thought that we were "swamped." Not since the famous Fall of 1930—the season of such stellar fiction as CAKES AND ALE, THE WATERGIPSIES, IMPERIAL PALACE—have we been privileged to present in less than one month a list so rich and varied in potential sales, both immediate and lasting.

Here are best-sellers and stock items in fiction and non-fiction to add to those Doubleday, Doran books that are already selling—books such as CAPTAIN NICHOLAS, HOLY DEADLOCK, AMERICAN SONG, THE CROOKED LANE, EAST AND WEST, MAIDEN VOYAGE, OMAR KHAYYAM, MORE HARBOURS

OF MEMORY, ELIZABETH, HELL! SAID THE DUCHESS, CHAPTERS FOR THE ORTHODOX.

To back these up, we publish on November 7 Kenneth Roberts' great new Chronicle of Arundel, CAPTAIN CAUTION, and Richard Aldington's brilliant modern novel, WOMEN MUST WORK; while November 21 brings Sir Philip Gibbs' EUROPEAN JOURNEY, Booth Tarkington's LITTLE ORVIE, F. Tennyson Jesse's A PIN TO SEE THE PEEPSHOW, as well as (Turn here for Chapter II in a great sales story)

Jonathan Cape cables from London: "Advance subscription A VILLAGE IN A VALLEY beating all records. Will be outstanding popular present this Christmas." This is the story of the village that holds the Garden and

With the same story-telling genius, the same faultless sense of rhythm which produced that exquisite picture of a butterfly generation, "The Edwardians" and that memorable study of age, "All Passion Spent," Miss Sackville-West now records the history of Shirin le Breton—beautiful, elusive and curiously honest—whose first love was for the Island of Storn and its dangerous blue-reefed sea. A book of strange power and beauty—for immediate and lasting sales. $2.50

We believe in Denis Mackail. For inspired facility of style, for banter, for charming nonsense, backed by sound powers of observation, he is unsurpassed. John Cowper Powys

 Autobiography, by JOHN COWPER POWYS, will be published on November eighth.

 "I have tried to write my own life," says the author of Wolf Solent, "as if I were confessing to a priest, a philosopher, and a wise old woman. This book may hurt some and surprise others, but I cannot think it will appear dull to many."

 It is an utterly frank and completely unashamed account of a life of sensation—in which things are said that Powys has never before told, even to his famous brothers. Price $3.00.

 The World Outside, HANS FALLADA's new novel, will be published on November 22nd.

 It is a long novel—over 600 pages. It is about another Little Man, WILLI KUFALT, an ordinary person, not heroic, not criminal, genuinely desirous of becoming an honest citizen. But the other honest citizens won't let him—and he can't ever escape the shadow of the prison, the one real home he has known. In the end WILLI KUFALT returns to prison, rather relieved, as a matter of fact, to escape a harsh and contradictory outside universe.

That bare, bare outline makes The World Outside sound depressing. It isn't. The quickly moving incidents, the lively and various characters, the farce and humor and charm make that impossible.

Your Correspondents will not raise the "Better than Little Man, What Now?" hue and cry. They feel that it will be much more convincing for you to make the comparison and discovery for yourself. The first fifty booksellers writing in will get advance copies. Price $3.00.

Earth Conquerors, by J. LESLIE MITCHELL, will be published on November 24th.

WILLIAM BOLITHO wrote a book like this on the great adventurers. WILL DURANT wrote another like it on the great philosophers. And THOMAS CRAVEN wrote one on the great artists.

Earth Conquerors deals with the space-eaters—the great explorers—the nine men who found the Western world their oyster, to be opened up for civilization. Your Correspondents aren't listing their names here—but each Earth Conqueror was a man to whom could be applied the words

*Whether at feast or fight was he
He heard the noise of a nameless sea
On an undiscovered shore.*

Earth Conquerors is copiously illustrated and priced at $3.50.

CURRENT CURRENTS: The booksellers' reactions to Diamond Jim are twenty-four karat, of purest ray serene. Plucking out three at random from about fifty, ARTHUR KROCH says that it kept him up all night, I. WITKOWER that it belongs in every man's library, and CHARLIE JACKSON that "If booksellers don't get behind Diamond Jim one of the best sales possibilities of the season will be missed." . . . As this is being written on publication date, no public reaction is yet available, but if Diamond Jim isn't on best seller lists before two weeks is out, we miss our guess . . . which has been known to happen, of course. RIPLEY's Believe It or Not Omnibus has climbed into our own current best seller list, averaging close to 1,000 copies a week. Now In November and Nijinsky are loping along neck and neck, both appearing in The New York Times rankings regularly every week. An entirely new full-page advertising campaign is being devised to push Men of Art and Modern Art as an ideal Christmas gift, which they are . . . boxed together. And Life à la Henri publishes on the 2nd, a publication date which we herewith predict will be a literary and gastronomic event of the first magnitude.

WHY NOT TRY GOD?

by Mary Pickford

a little book that will be widely given and read this Christmas

Believing that within each one of us rests a beneficent power which is the key to achievement, personal fulfilment, and serene understanding, Miss Pickford, with great simplicity and conviction, tells of her own experiences on the road to right thinking. To quote: "My discovery was so wonderful and has brought me so much joy, given me so much spiritual light in the hardest hours of my life, that I want to share it with all who care to try it."

An Adventure Epic

RECOMMENDED BY THE BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB

Russell Owen, world-famous reporter, was a member of the first Byrd Antarctic Expedition, and for his dispatches of that memorable adventure, he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize. SOUTH OF THE SUN is a thrilling record of an expedition buried for more than a year in the Antarctic snows. It is the story of how forty-two men came to know one another—forty two men living alone at the bottom of the world, in a land where the day is one year long, where sunset lasts for hours, where the aurora flames overhead for months, where man is insignificant, and where there is the greatest spiritual peace in the world. A land of quick emotions and chill death, of adventure and of silence. This is not another "expedition" book—it is a personal record, unique of its kind.

THE MAP OF AMERICA'S MAKING

A beautiful edition of this popular and useful map. Through the legends on sea and land the story of American history is visualized. Columbus and Verrazano, Marquette and La Salle, Tremont and Lewis and Clarke, their routes are charted and dates recorded. Johnny Appleseed, Sam Houston, Custer and Whitman—these names mean more when seen against their geographical setting. Printed in seven colors, the Map of America's Making is an ornament to any room.

No one sees the map without settling down to a half hour's enjoyment of its drawings and legends, and no one can study it without having his knowledge of American history refreshed and stimulated.

Full size about 22 x 28 inches. Seven colors.

DOSTOEVSKY

By A. YARMOLINSKY,

Chief of the Slavonic Division, New York Public Library

Years of research have gone into the writing of this story of Dostoevsky, a book which draws upon all the vital material, chiefly in the original Russian, which has been collecting throughout the generations.

It allows the reader to see the man objectively, from the days of his sheltered childhood through his shadowed youth and the years of his maturity, lived against the background of a changing Russia. His sudden fame, the scaffold, the Siberian prison, the "sacred disease," passion, gambling, feverish labors—all these experiences give color and depth to the story. Furthermore, his works and his opinions are fully treated, and a full-length portrait of Dostoevsky—man, prophet, genius—emerges for the modern reader.

Home Library Presented to the White House

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Personally Accepted the Gift of 200 Books Made by the American Booksellers Association

IN THE FAMOUS BLUE ROOM of the White House on Tuesday there was a long mahogany table on which were arrayed two hundred books which had been selected by a committee as an addition to the library which had been started four years ago for the White House. At the end of the room was the broad desk of the Chief Executive, and at two o'clock the committee of presentation was ushered in and received with warm cordiality and with evident interest in the event. President Roosevelt, himself a great reader and lover of books, and Mrs. Roosevelt with the guests looked over the volumes while three of the committee who were authors of books which were being presented autographed their volumes: "The Good Earth" by Pearl Buck, "Anthony Adverse" by Hervey Allen and "Only Yesterday" by Frederick Lewis Allen. The other members of the committee were Edmund S. McCawley of Haverford, Pa., president of the American Booksellers Association, W. W. Norton, president of the National Association of Book Publishers, and Frederic G. Melcher, editor of the Publishers' Weekly and chairman of the committee which presented the first collection of five hundred books to the White House four years ago.

The presentation was quite informal but President McCawley as chairman added a few formal words, describing the spirit of the gift.

The presentation had been preceded by a luncheon with Mrs. Roosevelt as gracious hostess, and among the guests present, beside the library presentation committee, were Fannie Hurst, Lawrence Waterbury, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Mary W. Dewson, chairman of Women's National Democratic Committee.

One of the happy reminiscences of the committee of presentation will be the fact that the President, in his words of thanks, remarked that it was one of his hopes that before he left the White House he might leave one of the rooms remodeled to serve as a permanent library for the White House. He described a room on the floor below the Blue Room, looking over the south slope, now being used for the Social Bureau, which would be transferred to the new Executive Offices when they are completed. This room, being so easily approachable by everyone in the house, would be an admirable place for a permanent collection of books and for the two collections which have been presented for the use of all residents of the White House. Such a plan when carried out would be a culmination of the hopes of those who have presented these books who believe that the White House should be provided with a "home library" as a symbol of the place of the personal library in the homes of America.

The White House has never had such a library room and, up to four years ago, had no well-rounded library. The interest of the Hoovers and the Roosevelts in the plan for one has been natural in view of their known love of reading and it has been encouraging to those who have been back of this movement to establish a library. The only books in the White House when the Hoovers arrived, apparently, consisted of a set of bound volumes of Blackwood's Magazine strung along otherwise empty shelves. President Coolidge had found this old set in the White House when he arrived, had packed it away in the attic to make room for books of his own and books which were constantly being sent to him. When he moved away he shipped the accumulated books to Northampton and had the set of Blackwood's Magazine put back on the shelves. The only previous record of the presentation of a collection of books to a President dates back to the Grant administration when citizens of Boston heard the President was without a library and sent to him personally a collection of books with a bookplate especially designed for the purpose. This collection did not remain in the White House and is perhaps in the possession of the Grant family today. A specimen of that bookplate is in the collection of the American Antiquarian Society of Worcester. Dr. Rosenbach, who has a famous collection of books of Presidents, has been unable to trace one of the Grant library, nor is there one in the collection of Presidents' books made by John T. Winterich. Another White House collection was started by Mrs. Fillmore which has been lost sight of and books were presented by Mrs. Cleveland according to one story.

The five hundred books in the first gift covered the literature of all ages but, selected as a library for enjoyment and recreation rather than for reference and study, it attracted a great deal of attention and was printed complete in many newspapers and has served as a model for much list making and library building ever since.

You Can't Go Wrong on Stamps

A Hobby of Growing Importance to Bookshops and Book Departments

The Gimbel's Stamp Department consists of four glass-topped counters arranged in a square in the rear of the book department

WITH ALL THAT IS being said about the importance to bookstores of hobbies and leisure time interests and the part the bookseller can play in serving the needs of hobby riders, the fact must not be overlooked that during the past few years bookstores have come to be important factors in one of the most widespread hobbies in the country—stamp collecting. The fact that the Doubleday, Doran Book Shops have installed complete stamp departments in three of their New York stores and have engaged an expert to supervise these departments shows that stamps as a sideline for bookstores have won a permanent place.

Most important of the Doubleday stamp departments is the one in the Lord & Taylor Book Shop where a large counter has been given over to stamps and accessories. This department is under the direction of Mr. Proessel, who was for many years a stamp dealer in Philadelphia, and who knows stamps. Thomas R. Burns, assistant manager of the Doubleday shops, says that the only way to develop a successful department is to put it in the hands of someone who knows the subject thoroughly. Otherwise the customers are likely to know more than the clerks who wait on them, and that doesn't make for large sales. This is sound advice and the result of experience, as the Doubleday shops have been carrying stamp assortments for over a year now.

The other two departments over which Mr. Proessel has supervision are in the Doubleday shops in the Grand Central Station and in the Penn Terminal. He spends certain specified hours in each of these shops, and customers are being urged to call at the time he is in. The Doubleday shops offer a complete service to the collector and have found the new departments very successful during the short time they have been in operation.

The most elaborate stamp department in the city outside of independent dealers in stamps is probably at Gimbel Brothers department store. This department consists of four glass-topped counters arranged in a square in the rear of the book department. Especially worthy of mention is the method of display used in this department. (See illustration page 1565). Sets of stamps are mounted on black paper with identifying captions printed on in white ink, and these are placed below the glass tops of the counters and in glass frames behind the counters. These displays are kept right up to date. Last week, for instance, there was a card showing stamps with the portrait of Peter, now the Boy King of Yugoslavia with newspaper headlines to attract attention. The written material on the black display cards is complete enough to explain the stamps thoroughly, which is a distinct help to the beginning collector.

Connected with Gimbel's stamp department, but with a minimum of commercial tie-up, is Gimbel's Stamp Club, which meets every Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with from 500 to 600 members attending each meeting. The only other club like it, we are told, is run by Hochschild, Kohn in Baltimore.

J. S. Minkus, buyer for the stamp department, told us that this year is the fourth for both the club and the department. He told us, too, that the club meetings were held on the sixth floor of the store (the stamp department is on the first), and that there was no attempt made to sell or display stamps at the club meetings. At the meetings there are always prominent guest speakers to tell the members about different countries, so that at the end of the year the club has taken what amounts to a trip around the world. Among recent speakers have been the Consuls General of several different countries, authors of several books about stamps and collecting, James M. Farley, Postmaster General, and Alvin W. Hall, director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. At the end of each meeting the director of the club connects the talks that have been given with stamps and stamp collecting.

The club sponsors a weekly contest with $25 in prizes to those members who return the best answers to a set of twenty questions. The questions are on a different country each week. Not only does the contest stimulate interest in the club, but it also provides a link between the club and the stamp department, for the answers must be returned to the department, and are often returned in person. Sample questions from the United States contest are "When was the first U. S. stamp showing a ship issued?" and "Who was the first postmaster general to have his picture on U. S. stamps?"

Gimbel's stamp department is special agent in New York for covers mailed from the Byrd Expedition headquarters at Little America, Antarctica. Already orders have been taken for 6000 of these covers and a permanent display of envelopes mailed last year from the bottom of the world brings new orders constantly.

This department handles everything for both the novice and the advanced collector. There are packets containing a lot of stamps selling at a small price and there are single stamps that run as high as $100 and more. Complete sets are much in demand. Also in demand are books about stamp collecting, not only albums and the Postage Stamp Catalog, but the various books about collecting, which are kept constantly on display.

It's a successful department, too. Sales this year are doubling and tripling last year's, and they weren't so bad then.

Testimony that a stamp department can be a profitable sideline for a bookstore also comes from Lambert Grant of Utica, N. Y. Mr. Grant says that lack of experience in collecting is no obstacle to beginning a department; most men and women collected in their early years and it doesn't take long to pick up the necessary elementary knowledge. The wise bookseller, says Mr. Grant, will start the stamp department in a small way, gradually working it up to a maximum budget point. Stamp packets, albums, catalogs and all philatelic supplies carry a good working margin and, what is more important, a quick turnover. Organization of stamp clubs, particularly junior clubs, adds greatly to the interest and profit of the stamp department. Mr. Grant has a special room in the basement of his store for stamp club meetings, and Free Stamp Days, and Stamp Parties have resulted in plus sales. A Stamp Party held at Grant's last winter makes a good example of what can be done. Announcements were sent out to the stamp department mailing list, stating that admittance to the party could be obtained by purchases made during the week prior to the specified date. One hundred and fifty customers came. Educational movies were shown, followed by a short talk by one of the boys' secretaries of the local Y.M.C.A. and then "door" and "stunt" prizes were drawn. The publishers of a well-known stamp weekly provided copies for all the guests and there were special exhibits of many subjects. The success of his department day by day and of such special events as this party has made Mr. Grant enthusiastic about the prospects of his stamp department.

The Displeasures of Book Owning

WE ADD OUR applause to the suggestion which Dr. Robert S. Lynd of Columbia sends as to clearing out old books. "Why don't you start some discussion," he says in a letter to the house organ of the Columbia University Press, "on the displeasures of book owning? Books have been so smothered under ballyhoo about their 'precious,' 'permanent,' 'irreplaceable' character that I'll bet most people have a feeling that it's a slightly reprehensible business to clean their shelves periodically—a kind of selling out of one's intellectual life."

The plan thus brought forward is timely, because the Joint Board of Publishers and Booksellers has been discussing this very point at recent meetings and is developing a project which it hopes to launch in January, suggesting ways in which the bookseller can give first rate aid to his community, and in long perspective to his own business, by serving as agent for collecting unwanted books from home libraries and putting them into channels where they will do the most good. There are countless charitable organizations that can use the books no longer wanted. "A home may be known by the books you own" but "An unused book is a social loss." Houseclean your shelves regularly is good advice; someone would like the books you no longer read." People give away magazines when they have finished reading them, but they often give too sacred a position to bound books as if they were certain to reread and continue to use every volume which found its way to their shelves.

The practical suggestion of the Joint Board is that booksellers should take the initiative in making a connection with some local charitable organizations to gather books for them in the first ten days in January, such organizations as hospitals, children's homes, missions, churches or any other of the scores of similar institutions. There is a permanent organization which collects books for the American Merchant Marine Library which can put to good use any amount of reading matter.

The local organization interested in securing the books should take charge of the publicity, interview the newspapers, etc., the bookseller offering his store as a delivery point for the books and publicizing the idea to all his customers. The books would be handled by a committee of charitable organizations. The campaign should be conducted on a large enough scale to result in a measurable drain upon the unused accumulations of home libraries.

The bookseller would have no direct benefit from such a campaign but a remote advantage which would be readily understood by anyone to whom the appeal is made. If ten thousand books could be drained away from crowded shelves where they are not being used or likely to be used and put into active circulation, there would be a gain in every direction. With this drive timed for January, an active bargain book month, many customers might feel inclined to fill the gaps thus created with purchases they have been hesitating to make because of lack of room. Here is a plan which could be conducted on a basis of enlightened selfishness on the part of the bookseller and, if it proved successful, it might become an annual event.

Catalogs and English Tariffs

ENGLISH CUSTOMS authorities have decided that all catalogs are dutiable under the act of 1932, and this ruling means that English libraries must pay a duty on every type of catalog, even the scholarly serial catalogs whose production has the status of an international undertaking, catalogs like the general catalogs of the books of the Bibliothèque Nationale, of the Gesamt Katalog der Wiegen Druche, etc. This tariff of 20 per cent is levied in order to protect English printers but in its application it brings a continuing hardship on the international exchange of scholarly material.

The law under which this tax is levied is that of the Import Duties Act of 1932 and the ruling now being protested was made last March, so that the levy is on "catalogs, trade lists and advertising material other than such as are imported by post in a packet not exceeding eight ounces in weight."

Book Club Labeling

SAMUEL LEVINSON, well-known bookseller of Sacramento, writes to the Publishers' Weekly: "Some publishers persist in imprinting or affixing to jackets a notice of Book Club selection or recommendation, which places the bookseller in the singular position of advertising a ruthless competitor. Apparently our only recourse is to withhold from display all books so marked."

This letter arrives just as the Joint Board of Publishers and Booksellers has been discussing this subject, as the Joint Board found, from information received, that some booksellers objected to the display of this recommendation and advertisement of a club, while others see no reason to avoid the use of such labels. Perhaps a suitable compromise might be to have quotations of opinions from book clubs printed in the same way in which quotations from any book reviewing medium are printed and in the same type.

Booksellers who are interested in this issue should write to the Joint Board of Publishers and Booksellers, 347 Fifth Avenue, New York

Copyright Congress Postponed

THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT which was to have been hosts to the International Copyright Union at a conference next June has asked for a postponement to the following year.

New Advisor to Treasury Department

THE NEW YORK Times last Sunday carried a character sketch of Huntington Cairns, the Baltimore lawyer, who is the new legal counsel, employed by the United States Treasury Department to judge the morality or immorality of books coming through the United States customs. The portrait of Mr. Cairns was drawn by Herbert Gaston, who has charge of the public relations for the Treasury Department.

"Mr. Cairns," said Mr. Gaston, "is a cultured man of extremely wide reading, and he has been employed as a part-time official to read doubtful books and to report to the Treasury. Of course, his judgment is not final. A book may be referred to other officials in this department. It may reach the legal counsel of the department here in Washington. It may reach the Secretary of the Treasury himself."

"The Treasury Department will determine what its action shall be as each case, as each book, comes before it. The department has no general policy."

"Mr. Cairns's friends say that he is particularly aware of literary values and is responsive to them, that he is liberal in his views, peculiarly well acquainted with modern social philosophies, and something of a philosopher himself. Their guess is that works of real literature will not suffer because of his censorship."

"Mr. Cairns was born in Baltimore, the son of a business man. He studied in the Baltimore Public Schools, at Baltimore City College, and at the University of Maryland, taking his law degree there in 1925. Admitted to the bar in the same year, he joined an old Baltimore law firm, Piper, Carey & Hall, of which he is still a member."

"He has read widely in Latin and Greek, but he has not confined himself to the ancients. He has written much, including book reviews for The Evening Sun of Baltimore and for other publications. He has just completed a volume on the law and the social sciences."

"Several times he has challenged the judgment of customs officials on books they regarded with suspicion. On one occasion, at least, he went into the Federal courts and won his case. That was in connection with the importation by a Baltimore bookseller of a work by Longus, the Greek romancer."

How to Predict a Best Seller

"Information That Will Be Welcome to Booksellers"

GEORGE JOEL

Publicity Director of Covici, Friede

PREDICTING THE SALES of a book before publication is hazardous business at best, especially since it must be sadly admitted that publishers are incurable optimists. Only a month or so ago a publisher, in talking to a literary critic about one of his firm's forthcoming novels, remarked airily and in all seriousness, "Oh, it won't sell as well as Farrar's 'Anthony Adverse'—I don't believe it will go over 200,000 copies." What happened to that book since this statement was made is sad indeed, and to blame this exuberance on an honest mistake in judgment is to stretch one's imagination to the breaking point. There are times, however, when a publisher has a book that he knows will sell, and is even able to explain why it will sell.

Publishers' Weekly, an amiable and polite publication, keeps some of its soft- and polite-voiced staff busier by having them phone publishers for information about books not yet published. These voices seem to have an almost pathological desire to know: 1. How much money is going to be spent on advertising. 2. What displays are being prepared. 3. What forms the exploitation and publicity will take. But I don't remember ever having been asked to tell why a book would or should sell.

It is in answer to that unasked question that this piece is concerned. I am sure this information will be as welcome to booksellers as an article by a Herkimer bookstore owner (shelf capacity 200 volumes) on how to dress windows with empty preserve jars and discarded corn cobs. Naturally enough I refer to one of our own publications, to wit: Gene Fowler's "Father Goose: The Story of Mack Sennett" (October 25th). Fowler's two previous books, "The Great Mouthpiece" and "Timber Line" have certainly played some part in keeping bookstore landlords in a state of inaction, so naturally there has been some interest in the announcement of his new book. In fact, the first printing was 25,000 copies. But before, as they say in vaudeville,

I "go into the dance," a review of the reception accorded Fowler's other books should prove enlightening.

Gene Fowler

The advance orders for "The Great Mouthpiece" were about 800 copies. At the time it seemed to Covici, Friede salesmen that the booksellers had been exchanging letters because they all raised the same objections: "No one is interested in a New York lawyer named Fallon, and who was he anyway?" 50,000 copies of "The Great Mouthpiece," and this includes the reprint sale, have been sold thus far. You would imagine that this would convince booksellers that Fowler was salable. Yet when salesmen came around two years later with "Timber Line: The Story of Bonfils and Tammen," they met with a similar type of rebuff: "Very local stuff." "It will sell only in Denver." "Nobody East of the Mississippi has ever heard of the Denver Evening Post." "People will think this is a Western." The answer is that Macy's sold scarcely 1000, Womrath's 800 and only recently, a year after publication, Covici, Friede found it necessary to issue another, the seventh, edition of this book about two Denver newspaper men whom nobody knew.

It must be admitted that the opposition to "Father Goose" has been delightfully facile, as is indicated by the first printing. The book will sell 40,000 copies by the first of the year, and I will tell you why.

Even the most rabid advocate of over-advertising admits that a bookseller's enthusiasm for a certain title results in sales. Naturally if there are talking points in a book, that is, things that can be repeated, this gives the book a good start. The perpetual cry, "Have you heard the story about—" is still considered good form in polite and impolite society, and even in bookselling. If the yarn in question can be credited to a person known to the listener, it is assured that much more readily of a favorable reception. We are all familiar with the old idea of bolstering up a weak story by crediting it to a well-known name. Such people as Abraham Lincoln, Mark Twain, Chauncey Depew, the much-quoted and more recent Dorothy Parker, have had stories and happenings attributed to them of which they were entirely innocent. The mere fact that they were involved gave what might otherwise have been a pointless story very much of a point. After all, it isn't "Ike" Hoover's story-telling ability or style that makes "My Forty-two Years in the White House" a fascinating book. But when he quotes Mrs. Coolidge as having said to the late Mr. Coolidge, "What's the matter, papa, don't your teeth fit?" the remark is recounted over and over again because it concerns a nationally known figure. Naturally, in repeating such a story Mr. Hoover's book is mentioned.

Fowler is a great writer of anecdotes. He has proved that in his previous books. His stories can stand entirely on their merit, and in "Father Goose" he uses the same talent; but in addition he has as his figures a gallery of picture stars which includes Charlie Chaplin, Mack Sennett, Gloria Swanson, Ford Sterling, Mabel Normand, Fatty Arbuckle, D. W. Griffith, Marie Dressler, Eddie Foy and Ben Turpin. This assures "Father Goose" of a tremendous amount of word-of-mouth advertising, and that means sales.

If This Borders on Treason

ANONYMOUS RUSTICUS VERMIVERTOR

Every time I pick up Books,
 Gadzooks,
 Or the Times Book Review or the Sat.Rev.Lit., for that matter,
 My heart goes pitter-patter,
 And my assets go a notch lower.
 It makes me sore
 To find that a lot of bound sheets bearing printed words,
 For which I paid good money, have been relegated to the scrap-heap by some birds
 Who are trying to give them away
 With, say,
 A pound of onions, or a Rolls Royce, or a Membership in the Suckers' Society.
 My piety
 Drops from me like a cloak, and I want to sit right down and write publishers, and ask them how many people are there in America, do they think,
 Who have progressed so little from the Missing Link
 That they will pay either earned or unearned kale
 For something offered for sale
 Free.
 Gosh, also gee!
 How does a publisher expect to retain my good will Unless he at least tells me what books he is going to kill?

When they die right on my shelves, young ones, too,
 I see red, even though I may feel blue.
 And while I am about it,
 Telling publishers how to run their business, and all, let me shout it
 To the ridgepoles that why more of them don't see
 That a book on my shelves costs them no more in storage and is a darned sight more likely to be sold than if it was out of sight in their warehouse, is beyond me.
 And then, there is that publisher who breaks
 His own publishing dates;
 My customers order direct from him, because, they say, they get their books earlier.
 When surlier
 Booksellers are made, that practice will make them.
 It's mayhem.
 And then there are those guys
 Whom I despise
 Who peddle out sheets or plates
 To skates
 Who make up Premium Sets to go with magazine subscriptions; one year Henty, two years Scott, three years Disraeli, sign here please.
 Cheeze!
 At the least, publishers should let the trade have similar sets on similar terms,
 The worms.
 Do they ever stop to think
 How close to the brink
 They drive booksellers
 When they get their salesmen fellers
 To load up a bookstore with a good, staple, well-selling line, like a Library or a standard Series,
 And then when it gets rolling cut the discount on it, deaf to the proprietor's catcalls and jeers?
 And perhaps publishers will confess
 That it doesn't cost a small shop less
 To make a sale than a big one; in fact, it usually costs more, whether you're in Podunk or New York or in the Hub City;
 So that a quantity discount is actually an unjustifiable subsidy.
 Well, Hell.
 It's too much to ask publishers to let the small shops know when They "temporarily reduce" the prices of staple items, and when they are going to jack them up again.
 There's plenty more grief
 In my basket, but I must be brief.
 Even good, big desirable city accounts, for instance, would appreciate
 An extra dust-jacket to every six or eight Copies.
 Well, Harpies,
 Now you've got prices nailed
 Remember that the bookseller's only defense against the mailed
 Mitt is to refuse to take or fill orders.
 If this borders
 On treason, make the most of it.
 Dixit.*

News of the Week

Smith and Haas Abandon New Books Plan

JUST AS WE go to press, we received word that for various considerations, among the most important of which is the fact that a number of booksellers have felt it would be harmful to their interests, Smith & Haas have decided to abandon the "New Books" experiment.

Publishers' Code Authority Rules "New Books Inc." Advertising Does Not Violate Code

THE TEMPORARY CODE AUTHORITY for the Trade Book Publishers held a meeting on Monday, October 22nd at which the Chairman presented a letter from Harrison Smith and Robert Haas, Inc., dated October 18th asking: "Does the proposed full page advertisement of New Books, Inc., captioned as 'A New Plan in American Advertising' submitted to the New York Times constitute a violation of Article III, Rule 15, of Divisional Code G (Trade Book Publishing Division of the Code of Fair Competition for the Book Publishing Industry, approved October 1, 1934)?"

The Temporary Code Authority thereupon made the following ruling:

"That the above described proposed advertising does not constitute a violation of the Trade Book Publishing Code."

Bennett Cerf of The Modern Library, Inc., made the following statement for the record:

"The members of this Committee wish to emphasize the fact that this is a technical ruling and in no wise reflects their individual opinion of the possible ill effect of the plan of New Books, Inc., on the Trade Book Publishing Business."

Whitney Darrow of Charles Scribner's Sons, W. W. Norton, Alexander Grosset of Grosset & Dunlap, and Morgan Shuster of D. Appleton-Century Co., made the following additional statement for the record:

"In voting for the foregoing ruling we desire to record our personal opinion that the style of advertising in question is in the nature of price comparison advertising, which was held to be prejudicial to the best interests of the industry in the debates which took place in October, 1933, on the proposed Trade Book Code.

"We feel that if there is any value in the Code of Fair Competition for the Book Publishing Industry it is that it constitutes an attempt on the part of the industry to maintain bookstore outlets.

"It should be remembered that the general public cannot be expected to understand the highly technical operations which enter into the selection, publishing and distribution of books, and that anything which tends to foster the idea, however, erroneously conceived, that the prevailing prices for current books are excessive will be harmful to both the cultural and the economic side of the book publishing industry. It is further our opinion that anything which tends to create confusion as to the fair cost of books is against the general purpose of the Code, although we understand that the Temporary Code Authority has no jurisdiction except in cases of technical violations of the Code."

Book Fairs in Middle West

THREE LARGE DEPARTMENT stores in the Middle West, Joseph Horne Co. in Pittsburgh, Halle Bros. in Cleveland and the J. H. Hudson Co. in Detroit held book fairs this week. Halle Bros. has for a number of years held a book fair annually, while the Jos. Horne Co. held its last fair eight years ago. This fall the three were held simultaneously enabling the publishers to send their authors to each of the stores in turn where they spoke and autographed their books.

Greater Cleveland Book Festival

IN CONNECTION WITH Children's Book Week, Cleveland will hold a Greater Cleveland Book Festival November 11th to November 18th inclusive, sponsored by Cleveland public libraries, public schools, parochial schools, churches, women's clubs, Parent-Teacher Association, book stores, numerous groups and individuals and The Cleveland Plain Dealer. The object of the Festival is to further interest in the reading of books of literary merit and to encourage purchase of good books for home libraries.

Complete Publishers' Code Available

COPIES OF THE Book Publishing Code (Approved Code No. 523) can be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., at five cents per copy. The pamphlet, which contains the approved text of the code now legally binding, includes the report to the President from the administrative officer, Basic Code, and five Divisional Codes for the Bible, Medical and Allied Book Publishing, Play and Dramatic Text Publishing, Subscription and Mail-Order Book Publishing, and Trade Book Publishing.

Office Workers' Union Protests Code Provisions

THE OFFICE WORKERS' UNION, Literary Trade Section, has sent to the National Recovery Administration Board a protest against the hours and labor provisions of the Publishers' Basic Code which it claims were "suddenly announced," on October 1st.

The requests of the Union were presented at the hearing on May 24th by Laura Carmen and with the evidence of other witnesses were entered on the minutes of the hearings at the direction of the presiding officer Robert Houston and as part of the minutes were taken under advisement by the various boards. Miss Carmen believed, however, and stated in a letter to the members of the Union after her return that her clauses had been approved. This statement is a misunderstanding, Washington comments, of the procedure in connection with codes.

The requests were for a $16 minimum wage with no exceptions, instead of $14 and $15 minimum with exceptions "for office boys, office girls, messengers and the like," uniform with provisions in the Periodical Code. A maximum working week of 35 hours instead of 40; no more than 48 hours of unpaid overtime instead of 64; time and a half for overtime instead of time and a third; two weeks vacation with pay for all who work overtime instead of no provision as to paid vacations.

The Union claims that its inquiries as to code progress were evasively answered. The NRA states the inquiries were answered in the same form in which other requests for information were acknowledged.

Send in Your Slogans

IN RESPONSE to the request in the Publishers' Weekly of October 6th, the Joint Board has received a number of suggested slogans to be used with the program stressing the home ownership of books. However, before the final choice of a slogan is made, the Joint Board would like to have more slogans from which to choose. More booksellers are urged to write to Marjorie Griesser, Secretary of the Joint Board of Publishers and Booksellers at 347 Fifth Ave.

To the Booksellers of America

Since the approval of the Booksellers Code, on April 13, 1934, the National Booksellers Code Authority has attempted to obtain money for its operation from the funds collected by the National Retail Code Authority, or the various Local Retail Code Authorities. It would now appear that this will not be possible and that it will be necessary to finance the National Booksellers Code Authority through assessments on bookselling establishments.

Deputy Administrator Harry C. Carr, in charge of the Retail Distributing Trade including Schedule B, has informed the Code Authority as follows:

"Under the present provisions of the Booksellers' Code, your Code Authority, may assess and collect assessments from booksellers who have not paid their assessment to the National Retail Code Authority."

The National Booksellers Code Authority has prepared a budget and submitted it to the Administration for approval along with a basis and method of assessment. It is expected that this assessment will be made immediately upon approval which is expected shortly.

Alexander Woollcott Sells "Lost Horizon"

WHEN ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT recommends a book, the book begins to sell at a breathless speed. We're enthusiastic about "Lost Horizon," too but, so far as we know, our praise has sold only three copies. But three weeks ago, on his Sunday night Cream of Wheat hour, Alexander Woollcott said "I feel like going to the window and telling people they're fools to be doing anything but reading 'Lost Horizon,' and on Monday morning the office boy at William Morrow when he unlocked the front door found eight telegraph orders. By Tuesday night sixty stores had ordered by mail, phone and telegraph. On Saturday of last week, a sixth printing, the largest, of 5000 copies, was ordered by the publishers, making a total of 18,000. Last Sunday night Mr. Woollcott broadcast again, saying that he was taking a midnight train Sunday night to attend the Hudson, Horne, and Halle Book Fairs in Detroit, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. A nice mixture of avarice and vanity would lead him to recommend "While Rome Burns," but he would probably neglect his own book to sell "Lost Horizon." On Tuesday a thousand copies were ordered by booksellers, the largest day's orders since publication.

The Mead Book & Stationery Company, Greenwich, Conn., reports by the way that they sold a copy a day of "Lost Horizon" during the month of September even before the Woollcott broadcasts.

Alma Savage, for some years assistant trade manager of the Boston branch of The Macmillan Co., and more recently with the Publishers' Weekly, has now been appointed advertising manager of Sheed and Ward, Inc.

David McKay Company have made arrangements with Walt Disney for the publication of two new Silly Symphony books, "Peculiar Penguins" which will sell for 35c. and "The Wise Little Hen" for $1.00. "Mickey Mouse Movie Stories" was published October 15th at $1.50.

Carl F. Sutton of Suttonhouse, publisher, has been in New York for the past few weeks making arrangements with agents here to handle the publications of his growing enterprise and arranging for some selected educational material which he will handle on the Coast in connection with his own publications. Mr. Sutton has, through travel and contacts, built up a wide acquaintance with the school and library fields on the Coast and is publishing books to fit the needs of these markets. Mr. Sutton has made a specialty of books for supplementary reading which particularly relate to the interests of the California schoolrooms. These books are attractively illustrated by local artists.

Among the Authors

Bruce Rogers, the noted printer, is a guest aboard Alan Villiers' frigate, the Joseph Conrad, en route from Plymouth, England, to the United States. Mr. Villiers' new book, "Whalers of the Midnight Sun," was published by Scribner's this month.

Bookshop Notes

Down around the Wall Street district the bankers and brokers are waiting until election is over before they buy many books. Rumana McManis of the Hidden Bookshop tells us that in spite of the fact that her shop is in the midst of the Republican stronghold, Hoover and Wallace are selling neck and neck. The best selling of the economic-political books at the moment is Frank R. Kent's "Without Gloves," but anything on economics outsells the average novel.

Farther uptown, at the Beacon Bookshop, Karl Placht finds that while there was more prepublication interest in the Hoover book, Wallace threatens to be the better seller of the two. At least, interest in "New Frontiers" seems to be increasing, while sales on "The Challenge to Liberty" are slowing down. At both the Beacon and the Hidden Bookshops there was a great deal of interest in the possibilities of Secretary Ickes' book, "The New Democracy," which is to be published October 29th.

The same story is told by the Channel Bookshop on Park Avenue—a tremendous advance on the Hoover book and not much sale after publication; no advance on the Wallace book but a slow, steady sale since publication. At the Channel, Glenn Frank's "America's Hour of Decision" and Ralph Robey's "Roosevelt vs. Recovery" are also in demand. Among fiction titles, two of the shop favorites are doing well, the Hawthorn-den Prize edition of "Lost Horizon" and Jules Romains' "The Proud and the Meek." Harriet Anderson says that they are hoping for a good sale for "The Curate's Wife" by E. H. Young.

The best seller at the Beacon Book Shop, Mr. Placht says, is "City Editor" by Stanley Walker, who is city editor of the New York Herald Tribune. Personal recommendations in the shop are responsible for the sale of nearly 100 copies of "Cape Farewell" by Henry Martinsson (Putnam) and another favorite is Peter Fleming's "One's Company."

The favorites for October at Brentano's in Washington were decidedly political books: first, Wallace's "New Frontiers"; second, Hoover's "Challenge to Liberty"; third,

"Roosevelt vs. Recovery"; and seventh on the list, "Freedom vs. Organization."

We picked up a couple of good ideas on a recent visit to the Putnam Bookstore. Right in front of the door of the store, inside, is a column. This has been made useful and decorative with a series of shelves facing the door on which are placed the most important books of the week. Above is a sign "The Putnam Bookstore Recommends . . .". One table farther back in the store is loaded with titles on all the current topics. This struck us as a better idea than having separate counter displays of books on money, for instance, or Germany. The Putnam table has books on these subjects as well as on the New Deal, fascism, anti-semitism, and all the rest of the live topics. Customers know that the book they are looking for after last night's discussion will very likely be found on this table.

Margaret Buddy of Young Books tells us that "Living Authors" and "Authors Today and Yesterday" published by the H. W. Wilson Company are good staple stock items for that shop; they also have a good sale as Christmas gifts. The new "Junior Book of Authors," to be published November 1st, will also sell well there because of the shop's predominant interest in children's books.

On Wednesday, October 17th, the Young Books held its fifth anniversary party. The guest of honor was Ludwig Bemelmans of Hapsburg House, author and illustrator of "Hansi," just published by the Viking Press who signed copies of his books. Among the other guests were Georges Duplaix, author of "Gaston and Joséphine," John O'Hara, author of "Appointment in Samarra" and F.P.A.

A novel variation of the handcraft lists being compiled for Children's Book Week has been devised by the Bookshop for Boys and Girls in Boston. The list is called "Behind the Battlements" and covers books about the Medieval Period, including those about the medieval craftmakers. Single copies are available at 15 cents each, or quantities can be bought for $7.50 a hundred. Bookshops can also get the list arranged as an attractive bulletin-board poster with a picture illustrating castle life.

Hugh Tregaskis of the well-known rare book firm of James Tregaskis & Son is in America for a short time on a pleasure trip with Mrs. Tregaskis. They have been stopping at the Hotel Wellington, and will visit other cities including Philadelphia, Washington and Boston. The catalogs of the house of Tregaskis are familiar to every American collector and dealer.

Booksellers League Celebrates Its Fortieth Birthday

THE BOOKSELLERS LEAGUE of New York begins its fortieth year of existence this month. The first of the five yearly dinners was given on October 17th in the Rose Room of the Fifth Avenue Restaurant, the President, W. R. Barnes, in the chair, with eighty members present. The guests of honor were Dr. V. C. Pederson, author of "Nature's Way," who gave an illuminating talk on sex relations, his subject being listed as "The New Knowledge"; Arthur Stringer, who has a long list of books to his credit, sketched in a humorous vein his likes and dislikes of the many with whom he had been in contact for the past thirty years. His talk was entitled "Wild Labrador." Louis Adamic, author of "Native's Return," polished off the evening with a very interesting talk on that land of racial contrasts, Yugoslavia, and the late King Alexander and his failings as a monarch.

The Chairman announced a Contract Bridge Tournament for the Sim's Booksellers League Prize, a handsome silver shaker to be awarded to the winner next March. A vote was taken on the question of admitting women members of the booktrade to membership in the League, resulting in its overwhelming defeat.

OLD & RARE BOOKS

FREDERICK M. HOPKINS

THE CURRENT CATALOG issued by Goodspeed's Book Shop, of Boston, No. 233, "Rare Americana," contains 66 octavo pages and 199 lots, restricted to rarities, all worth the attention of collectors. There are many facsimiles, and the descriptions and notes are written with scholarly fullness and care. A few outstanding items include an unrecorded pamphlet on the New York and New Jersey boundary dispute; a unique collection of relics of the frigate Constitution including manuscripts, books, miniature portraits, drawings, etc.; a medical botany printed by Franklin; treaties of the French and Indian War period; first or rare editions of the Indian Captivities of Massy Harbison, Mary Jamison, Mrs. Johnson, Nathaniel Segar, and Mary Smith; Josselyn's two voyages to New England; John Quincy Adams's copy of a rare run of Massachusetts House Journals; Cotton Mather's life of John Eliot; Morton's New Canaan; first editions of Peters's history of Connecticut, Hutchinson's Massachusetts; Smith's New York, Havwood's Tennessee, Ira Allen's Vermont, and Stith's Virginia; Boston Massacre orations; Journals of the first six sessions of the United States Senate; and Trott's Laws of the Province of South Carolina. The last 12 pages of the catalog are devoted to rare Western Americana. We seldom see a catalog with such a large percentage of original source material in a form so deserving of preservation.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY have published "Lafcadio Hearn: A Bibliography," by P. D. and Ione Perkins, which has involved years of research in its preparation. In addition to the collations of the American first editions, it contains descriptions of translations into other languages, including many Japanese issues unknown to American collectors, books about Hearn in English and other languages, periodicals, and newspapers containing original work, a list of the reviews and appreciations of Hearn, and finally unpublished manuscripts about Hearn and music for which the lyrics were taken for his writings. In his introduction Dr. Sanki Ichikawa, professor of English at the Imperial University of Tokyo, writes: "This is the first literary bibliography in which due international cognizance is taken of the Japanese literature on the subject. . . . It will fill a long-felt want, a great boon alike to the student and collector. . . . His first editions are getting more and more difficult to obtain and his letters fetch prohibitive prices." The volume of 261 pages, illustrated, measures seven by ten inches, is bound in green linen with paper label, and is limited to 300 copies.

JOHNSON BRIGHAM, State Librarian of Iowa and one of the most honored figures in the library world, has won the award of the Iowa State Library Association, given annually for the outstanding contribution to the literature of Iowa, for a book, "The Youth of Old Age," published last spring by Marshall Jones. The award takes the form of a plaque designed by Christian Petersen, Iowa sculptor. Charles H. Compton, president of the American Library Association, was the speaker at the public meeting which announced the award.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY is gradually building up one of the most complete collections of Woodrow Wilson's writings, biographies and portraits in this country. The war president, who was the second Princeton graduate to live in the White House, left several of his works to the university library and soon after his death a group of friends subscribed a small fund to add to the collection. Chief among the memorials in the collection is the original draft of President Wilson's first inaugural address, which was typewritten and corrected by his own hand. The library is also in possession of the famous portrait of Wilson by Stanley Middleton, also the two woodcuts by Timothy Cole, one from life and the other a copy of the portrait by John Singer Sargent. The collection now numbers 500 volumes, including every important biography as well as many books dealing with the period. There are also fifteen large folio volumes filled with obituaries of Wilson taken from the newspapers of the United States and foreign countries.

WE HAVE already referred to the first sale of the season at the American Anderson Galleries which occurred on October 24th and 25th when the library of the late Thomas Hughes Kelly was dispersed. In an "Appreciation" in the catalog John Anderson, Jr., referring to the Irish section, an important part of the library, writes: "Over forty years ago, as a young graduate of Columbia University, Mr. Kelly visited my little bookshop in Nassau Street, and inquired for books relating to Ireland. I supplied him with such as I had in stock, and could secure from other sources. So ardent was he in the pursuit that it led to my making two trips to Ireland, where I purchased for him a large proportion of the notable items appearing in this collection. He was a close student of Irish history and literature, and, withal, a discriminating one."

THE MOVEMENT, now well under way, of restoring the house where Eugene Field passed his earliest years, by subscriptions from children the world over, is quite as it should be. Field is the children's patron saint, the man who loved little children better than anything else in life, and the tribute of preserving the place where he lived when an infant by the children of a later generation is a kind of recognition and fame that would make the poet happy, if he could but know it. Experts are at work, restoration has begun, and if Field could return he would soon be able to walk into his childhood home and scarcely realize that nearly eighty years have passed since the time "when the toy dog was new, and the soldier was passing fair."

HOW TO RUN A RENTAL LIBRARY

by
Groff Conklin

Written so simply and clearly that every step is covered for the beginner; yet the experienced library owner will find many tips in it, too, for Mr. Conklin studied the systems and methods of more than 50 circulating libraries before he wrote this book. He tells just what to look for when one is picking out a location for the library, what furniture, fixtures and supplies are necessary and how they should be arranged (a chart shows the natural movement of traffic through the store). Mr. Conklin outlines the simplest and most efficient card file system for the circulating library and the simplest book-keeping system. This book will save time and money for the beginner or the established circulating library.
